Co-Director of CBTBR speaks at Harvard School of Public Health

Valerie Mizrahi was invited by the Department of Immunology and Infectious Diseases (IID) of Harvard School of Public Health to present a talk in Boston on 20 February, 2008, as Distinguished Lecturer for the IID/Boston TB Meeting Seminar Series. Her lecture, entitled "Survival and Subversion Strategies of M. tuberculosis: Lessons from Resuscitation, Stress-Induced Mutagenesis and Propionate Metabolism" was attended by scientists from Harvard University, the Broad Institute, the University of Massachusetts and institutions in the broader Boston area. During her visit, which was hosted by Dr. Sarah Fortune, Valerie interacted with numerous colleagues and collaborators and their postdoctoral fellows and postgraduate students.
